Designer Profile: MAXFOWLES

IMG_0472

Husband and wife designer duo MAXFOWLES just previewed their Spring 2013 collection and, yes, we want every single piece. Haven't heard of MAXFOWLES (Max and Parisa Fowles-Pazdro)? That may be because they haven't been around for long. Having debuted their first ready-to-wear collection for Fall 2012, the brand is still starting out, but we're guessing that their designs are likely to become a household name within the next few years.

The Fowles-Pazdro team bases their designs on a jet-setting woman. Inspired by the different cities they love and know, the international couple (now living in Los Angeles, Parisa was born in Iran, raised in Stockholm and Max is a London native) combine textures and shapes to create clothing that is structured and polished, yet effortlessly cool. The result is elegant, wearable and, well, re-wearable. We love the timelessness each piece exudes—from flowy blouses to architectural leather jackets, every item can be styled again and again (and in so many ways!).

While the Fall 2012 collection was entirely neutral (color-wise) and designed for sleek New York women with sexy Parisian style, Spring 2013 brings in plenty of color and pattern, reminiscent of Capri. You'll love the designs, which incorporate luxurious fabrics in playful ways and showcase exquisite attention to detail. We see these clothes all over the fashion elite: the Olsens, Blake Lively, Victoria Beckham and Alexa Chung are all perfect candidates for the jet-setting style of MAXFOWLES. Shop the collection online for yourself at RevolveClothing.
